Portal de l'Àngel

"The Most Expensive Street in Spain"

A landmark district in Barcelona, the Portal de l'Àngel is always filled with people looking for a bargain inside one of the cool boutiques. Located in the Ciutat Vella (old city), the Portal de l'Àngel has a wide variety of stores and it is the second most popular area to shop in the city. The district extends from the Plaça Catalunya and runs along the Avinguda Diagonal all the way to the Barri Gòtic.

Santa Caterina Market

"Neoclassical, Yet Steeped in Tradition"

In the same vicinity as Las Ramblas and the Museu Picasso, the Mercat Santa Caterina is a great place to spend some quality time, whether one is looking to do some serious shopping or just stroll around. Existing since 1848, the market has undergone a makeover, and one that's best appreciated from a high vantage point. Housed under the undulating roof are stalls retailing in the finest goods Spain has to offer, a restaurant and incredibly, the remains of an early 13th century Roman monastery, parts of which are still on display.

La Rambla

"La strada simbolo di Barcellona"

Le Ramblas sono una delle principali destinazioni sia per i locali che per i visitatori e si estendono nel centro di Barcellona dalla Plaça de Catalunya fino al Monumento a Colombo vicino al mare. Questa famosa zona pedonale ospita diverse attrazioni degne di nota, tra le quali il Gran Teatre del Liceu e il Palau de la Virreina, oltre ad offrire numerose opportunità per lo shopping. Questo centro della vita culturale di Barcellona è delimitato da alberi e pieno di gente simpatica, soprattutto quando i ristoranti dispongono di tavoli all'aperto. Sia che si tratti di ammirare e ascoltare l'atmosfera de La Boqueria, uno dei mercati più spettacolari del mondo, o che si tratti di immergersi nel ritmo catalano in una piacevole passeggiata, Le Ramblas sono una tappa obbligata di Barcellona.

Passeig de Gràcia

"Catalan Modernism & Elegant Fashion"

Aside from being one of the best places to view Catalan Modernist architecture, Passeig de Gràcia is also the city's elegant shopping area par excellence. Foreign brands such as Ermenegildo Zegna, MaxMara, Escada, and Armand Bassi stand beside Spanish labels such as Purificación García, Camper, and Loewe. The exclusivity of Vogue, Bally, and Yanko are offset by more accessible shops like Mango, Globe, Benetton, and Laura Ashley. This street also boasts the Bulevard dels Antiquaris, which is excellent for antiques, as well as many restaurants and outdoor cafés, bookshops, and jewelers. At number 55, Boulevard Rosa also offers more than 50 small, elegant shops under one roof. Above all else, Passeig de Gràcia offers passerby boundless style and energy.
