Brassaii

"Beyond Expectation"

Iron gates, a brick courtyard and a 1904 industrial building: the exterior of Brassaii gives no hint of a chic and trendy restaurant, where modern Toronto bustles day and night. It wouldn't be help much to recommend a specific dish because the menu is changed frequently. However, the excellence in cooking and service remain constant, and the price is lower than most of its competitors. Do order a glass from the impressive wine selection, and save room for dessert. Better yet, come back and try a new, different meal.

Auberge du Pommier

"Classic and Romantic"

Located south of Highway 401 on Yonge Street, these two cottages have been transformed into one of the best restaurants in the city, specializing in French country dining. Auberge du Pommier was voted among the top 10 tables in Toronto by Gourmet magazine. From May to September, you can dine alfresco in a secluded terrace brimming over with flowers. Come winter, move inside to enjoy the wooden beams and stone fireplaces. Dishes include Rack of Lamb, Cream Sweet Corn Bisque and Smoked Breast of Capon. Indulge yourself in the impressive wine selection which consists mostly of French and Californian.
