Uniquities Architectural Antiques

"Earthy Antiques"

Uniquities Architectural Antiques offers one-of-a-kind 19th-century antiques and collectibles. The owner obtains most of the collectibles from England on regular sojourns. The treasures here include beautifully carved fireplaces as well as an iron spiral staircase that dates back to 1899. Although a lot of the items can be a little pricey, each item is incredibly detailed and handcrafted. Because most of these items are irreplaceable, Uniquities was the only Calgary store voted as one of the top 10 by Canadian House and Home Magazine.

Iron Crow

"One of a Kind"

Are you looking for the skull of a rare bird? An antique saddle or American Civil War weapon? Maybe an Elizabethan desk? Iron Crow calls itself a store of antiques and "objects of intrigue," and it is a good place as any to find unique items that make thoughtful gifts and give the home some personality. The store's wares are organized into collections called "Oil and Gas," "Western and Native American," "Bric a Brac," "Religious Artifacts," and "Furniture." The store is not small, it's a large warehouse full of intrigue.

Mantiques Antiques

"The Man-Cave & Beyond"

This antique store encourages visitors to find pieces to decorate a "man-cave or garage." In other words, it's the perfect place to find cowboy-themed Americana, old typewriters, sports memorabilia, tools that have withstood the test of time, and other things that are just not found or made as well anymore. The selection does tend toward the "man cave" décor, but all kinds of items suitable for any room in the house can be found here, and they are usually well-maintained. Note that Mantiques is located inside the Quality Tools Etc shop.

Where on Earth Did You Get That

"Airdrie's Largest Antique Mall"

This antique mall is located in the town of Airdrie, which is just 15 minutes from the north of Calgary accessible via the former Highway 2, Queen Elizabeth II Highway. This mall, called Where on Earth Did You Get That, is home to over 50 antique dealers, with a variety of useful, pre-loved, recyclable antiques from the mid-1900s to the early 19th Century. Though it can easily be taken for a museum, visitors are surprised at the abundance of antiques, from silver, china, vintage jewelery, old gramophones, antique furniture, paintings, and period gasoline station equipment.
