Green Flash Brewing Company

"Brewery Tours in a Warehouse"

Barrels rest on steel shelving units behind a long counter and below the high warehouse ceiling of Green Flash Brewing Company. Guests can stand at another counter, where bartenders stand ready to serve guests their choice of beer. Among their wide selection of beers, they offer a Double Stout Black Ale (brewed with oats and roasted malts), Saison Diego (brewed with Orange peels and ginger), and the East Village Pilsner (brewed with more hops than European pilsners). For those unable to go to the Green Flash Brewing Company, they sell their beers at various retailers throughout the United States. This brewery also contains a gift shop which offers shirts, hats and glassware.

Stone Brewing World Bistro & Gardens

"Everybody Must Get Stoned!"

Perched high on a hill in the industrial outskirts of Escondido, Stone World Bistro is quite literally a desert oasis. The cavernous dining room is adorned with slabs of granite, beams of steel and a 30-foot bamboo tree. The bar sits in one corner, in the shadow of the brewery's series of two-story brew kettles (which you can see up close and personal on the free daily brewery tour). Across the way, airplane-hangar-like doors open onto the facility's centerpiece, a beautifully manicured patio and garden about the size of a city block. Pathways snake past lawns, fountains, a creek, and a fire pit. Pick a spot and down a pint or two of the award-winning homemade beer including rarities. The food menu is a cut above your average pub grub, focusing on locally raised seasonal ingredients and exotic preparations. The on-site gift shop features everything from Arrogant Bastard hoodies to freshly jugged beer to go. See website for full menu, beer info, event calendar, online shopping, tour schedule and more.

The Lost Abbey Port Brewing Company

"Good Versus Evil"

The Lost Abbey Port Brewing Company has declared a war on evil, or simply bad, beers. Their goal is to make only divine, delicious beer that can be shared and savored amongst friends. The beer produced at this brewery certainly gives a nod to the ales brewed in the monasteries of Belgium, but they are still brews original and all their own. The brewery produces two different varieties of beer: the Belgian-style beers brewed under the Lost Abbey name, and an eclectic variety of West Coast brews under the Port Brewing label. Both collections of beer can be sampled at the tasting room in their brewery.

Karl Strauss Brewery and Grill

"Outstanding Specialty Micro-Brews"

Noisy, crowded and casual, this hip brewery draws young professionals to its chic space in downtown San Diego. With 10 to 12 specialty micro-brewed beers each day, you may have a hard time choosing what you'd like to drink. So, do not torture yourself. Try the sampler instead and enjoy four different beers in four-ounce glasses. Once you've found your favorite beer, pair it with a delicious meal. Entrees include pastas, burgers, salads, sandwiches and seafood.

Hess Brewing

"From Nano to Massive"

Mike Hess, the owner of Hess Brewing, first started out making home-brews in his garage. From there, his brewing production grew into a fully fledged brewery when he bought an industrial space and started making delicious beers on a "nano" brewery scale. Today, the brewery produces a collection of flagship beers, as well as seasonal and new brews that Hess wants to try out. Local favorites include the Solis IPA, My Other Vice Berliner Weisse, and Umbrix Rye Imperial Stout.

Modern Times Lomaland Fermentorium

"Beer Tastings"

Modern Times Lomaland Fermentorium is a historic 2000 square feet (185 square meters) warehouse that was renovated and turned into a brew pub. With over 16 taps available, beers are sold year round and include monthly and seasonal options. The interiors are a mix of contemporary and vintage decor and have several book shelves that separate the tasting room from the brew pub, as well as a large mural made out of post-it notes. Because the taps are always changing, there is always a reason to stop by this hip beer-lovers' paradise.
