Slave Lodge

"The Cape's Cultural & Social History"

The Slave Lodge, dating back to 1679, is one of the oldest structures in Cape Town. It originally housed slaves of the Dutch East India Company, criminals, and the mentally disturbed. Over the years its function changed, as did its exterior. Today it is the flagship of the six South African Cultural History Museum sites, housing collections of ceramics, toys, tools, silver and textiles, as well as artifacts from ancient Egypt, Greece, Rome, and the Near and Far East. This museum primarily focuses on the history of slavery in Cape Town. Other exhibits focus on the history of the Cape in general.

Iziko Maritime Centre

"Ships, Shipwrecks & Maritime History"

The sea has had a profound influence on the history of Cape Town and the Iziko Maritime Centre, located at the V & A Waterfront, gives an insight into that nautical bond with many interesting exhibits. Shipwreck artifacts, naval history, commercial fishing, passenger liners, and an actual navy ship can be seen here. The decommissioned SAS Somerset is berthed on a quay outside the museum – one of the six sites of the South African Cultural History Museum. The SAS Somerset is the only Boom Defence Vessel left in the world and is open to the public.

Camps Bay Beach

"At the Foot of the Twelve Apostles"

Camps Bay Beach is a broad stretch of palm tree-lined white sand bordering the bracing waters of the Atlantic ocean. Set at the foot of a spectacular series of mountain peaks, the Twelve Apostles, yet only 10 minutes from the city center by car, it is one of Cape Town's most popular beaches. It is not a sheltered beach, so if the wind is blowing it is advisable to head for Clifton, another breath-taking and more secluded beach just around the corner. The beachside road has a festive atmosphere with a good variety of cafes and restaurants offering great sea views.

Kirstenbosch National Botanical Garden

"Place of Natural Beauty & Peace"

Set in beautiful surroundings on the eastern slopes of Table Mountain, this magnificent 538-hectare (1329.43 acre) garden features a rich diversity of indigenous South African plants. The lower portion of Kirstenbosch consists of large flowerbeds and expansive lawns while higher up the slopes, the cultivated garden gives way to natural forest and fynbos. At the main entrance, an impressive conservatory houses a wide variety of plants from other climatic regions of South Africa. There is a restaurant, an information desk and a great shop. Come summertime, the gardens host the annual, magical Sunset Concerts. The gardens also have their own Stone Cottage which can be hired for various events like lectures, meeting and such other events. The cottage can accommodate about 60 people and has a self-catering service.

Wynberg Park

"Gardens and Playgrounds"

The Wynberg Park is one of the many green spaces which the people of Cape Town visit to escape the hustle and bustle of the city. It was legally established in 1902 in honor of King Edward's coronation, and was even originally named after him. The park covers an area of 22 hectares (54 acres), and while sections are beautifully cultivated into rolling lawns, water canals and rose gardens, other parts retain the wild chaotic beauty that was created during a period of negligence. It is here that the Krakeelwater river springs forth into existence.

Maynardville

"Shakespeare under the Stars"

The annual, open-air Shakespeare under the Stars performances are held at Maynardville. The shows usually run from late January to the end of February. These productions, which have been running for several decades, are set in the sprawling gardens of Maynardville Park. Take along a pre-production picnic and blankets as it might get cold. This is definitely a romantic evening out. The entire site is filled with historical importance and memorabilia. Its gates were once guarding the tomb of Napoleon Bonaparte, and the trees planted here are direct descendants of those from the tombs garden, taken as cuttings in the 1800s. Call for details regarding current and upcoming events.

Boulders Beach

"Amidst a Penguin Colony"

These rocks are named after the rounded boulders which shelter a beautiful swimming beach from the mischievous south-easterly winds. A part of Table Mountain National Park, Boulders Beach gives a unique opportunity to swim with Jackass (African) penguins. You'll find the main penguin colony at Foxy Beach next to the swimming beach where there is an attractive boardwalk. The friendly park staff will be happy to answer any questions. Although these penguins are among the most human-tolerant in the world, they can inflict a severe bite if their space is invaded, or they feel threatened. It is safe to maintain a safe distance of at least a meter between them and yourself. You'll be able to see a variety of other birds at Boulders. These include the African Black Oyster-catcher and the Crowned Cormorant plus numerous species of smaller birds.
