Clifton Beaches

"Sun Worship and Body Sculpting"

Clifton has a series of four beautiful beaches, separated by rocky outcrops. Although linked, each beach has its own character and atmosphere. Fourth Beach is largely considered to be the most fashionable beach in Cape Town and is often packed with beautiful bronzed bodies. The others are far more casual and usually less crowded. Each is sheltered from the south-easterly wind, unlike the nearby Camps Bay Beach, which makes them a popular hangout for lazy sun-worshippers. Swimming tends to be limited to quick cooling dips since the icy temperature of the Atlantic is enough to take your breath away.

Llandudno

"Picturesque Landscape"

Llandudno is a part of the suburbs Cape Town in Africa. The area was named after a Welsh Township, which it very closely resembles. Its location by the lovely beaches along the Atlantic Ocean makes it a prime real estate area. The water itself is popular with surfers: the rough seas create quite an adventurous challenge. The blue seas are a sharp contrast to the dramatic mountain peaks and the grey granite constructions: a picturesque scenery.

Muizenberg Beach

"Great Swimming and Loads of Beachside Activities"

This is a long stretch of gently sloping, white sand beach bordering the warm waters of the Indian Ocean. Muizenberg provides safe swimming and the moderately sized waves makes it a popular hangout for body-boarders and novice surfers. This is the ideal choice for families with young children since it has all the facilities that make for a great day at the beach. Behind the beach side pavilion is a seawater pool, putt-putt course and long curvy Super Tube (water slide). A new complex has been built alongside the pavilion to provide more changing-rooms, showers and safe lock-up facilities. Lining the car park is a collection of mini-vans selling fast food, ice-creams and cold drinks. There are a number of fascinating places to explore in the town of Muizenberg, including the Natale Labia Museum, Rhodes Cottage, the Toy museum and Collectors' Shop and the Masque Theatre.

Boulders Beach

"Amidst a Penguin Colony"

These rocks are named after the rounded boulders which shelter a beautiful swimming beach from the mischievous south-easterly winds. A part of Table Mountain National Park, Boulders Beach gives a unique opportunity to swim with Jackass (African) penguins. You'll find the main penguin colony at Foxy Beach next to the swimming beach where there is an attractive boardwalk. The friendly park staff will be happy to answer any questions. Although these penguins are among the most human-tolerant in the world, they can inflict a severe bite if their space is invaded, or they feel threatened. It is safe to maintain a safe distance of at least a meter between them and yourself. You'll be able to see a variety of other birds at Boulders. These include the African Black Oyster-catcher and the Crowned Cormorant plus numerous species of smaller birds.
