Buffalo Exchange

"Style & Class"

Since its conception in 1974, this establishment has grown from a little Tucson resale house to a Southwestern clothing empire with an environmental touch. It's not just a used clothing store, rather a place where hip customers look for the most current styles. There are new clothes here as well including scarves, belts, shoes, jewelry and handbags. It's a place that sells, buys and trades in a discriminating and socially conscious way. The Tokens for Bags Program raises money for several environmental organizations.

Pop-Cycle

"Unique Gifts"

Visit Pop-Cycle to find goods that are truly unique. That is because this shop sells goods made by local designers and artists that have been created by recycled and repurposed materials. Part secondhand shop and part gift shop, the staff here handpicks all of the items on the shelves, meaning that there is no junk that you have to sort through to get to the good stuff. The inventory constantly changes, meaning you never know what you might find when you visit.
