Park Chop Suey

"Not Your Regular Chinese Take-Out"

Essentially a Chinese restaurant, Park Chop Suey is located in close proximity to Lafayette Square. This humble restaurant, is a tab bit different from your regular Chinese take-out, and is home to the iconic St. Paul Sandwich and Triangle Crab Rangoons. Sandwiched between two white breads is a hot egg foo yong, dipped in mayonnaise and pickle and finally topped with lettuce and tomato. This modest little sandwich is filling and easy on the pocket. Renowned across the city for its traditional recipes, Park Chop Suey is always filled with hungry customers waiting to get their order. With minimal decor and cozy ambiance, this place seems to be perfect for a casual lunch or dinner take-away.

Blues City Deli

"Rich Man's Po' Boy"

Nod your head to great old blues music while partaking in some of the best service in St. Louis. Located a stone's throw away from Lafayette Park, these po' boy-makin' folks specialize in St. Louis, Memphis, Chicago, and New Orleans-style sandwiches on great fresh bread with soups, salads, and cookies. For beer-lovers, the selections hail from some of the best breweries in the country. If planning to dine at this quaint eatery during lunch, come early or late. Around noon, the place gets so busy that finding a seat is nearly impossible.

Mississippi Mud House

"Good Food, Coffee & Energy"

With its newly expanded menu and highly energized staff, Mississippi Mud House is a great place to stop while frolicking on Cherokee Antique Row. The coffee is amazing, and the chocolate chip cookies inspire a double take upon discovery that they are organic and vegan. It's a neighborhood spot, and the staff knows most of the customers by first and last name. It's peaceful and pleasant, especially on warm days; the back patio is a relaxing place to enjoy one of their many hot and cold beverages as well as breakfast and lunch items.
