Biblio Globus

"Modern Bookshop in Old Building"

The largest book store in Moscow, it is conveniently located next to Lubianka metro station. It is nevertheless never too crowded to let yourself get carried away in browsing. In general, books in Russia are still priced very cheaply by comparison to Western standards. While you are sure to find all Russian bestsellers in Biblio-Globus, they also have a good selection of books in foreign languages and a separate section with vocabularies. The children's books selection is great, ranging from plastic books to textbooks. The prices are known to be twenty to fifty percent lower than in the street book stalls or in other book stores. You can also buy or order books at the Biblioglobus Internet site.

Respublica

"Bibliophile Destination"

Respublica is a large bookstore in downtown Moscow where you can find any book you've been looking for. This mammoth store has two floors with books by Russian and foreign authors as well as books on art, architecture, cooking, painting along with albums and DVDs. Respublica is the equivalent of Barnes and Noble of New York and is a great hangout in itself. There is a cafe and theater on the second floor where there are frequent book readings and signings by authors. You can also catch a movie at the theater situated in the second floor.
