The Honest Pint

"Enjoy Irish Hospitality!"

The Honest Pint is an Irish restaurant and bar that perfectly fuses American and Irish styles of cooking. It prides itself in serving actual pints, unlike some drinking establishments serving a little less than a pint, and hence is aptly named The Honest Pint. Patrons can savor traditional Irish dishes with a touch of American flavor, thereby infusing innovation in the menu. The drinks menu perfectly complements the lavish food and features Irish whiskeys, scotch, Irish beers, craft beers and so forth. That's not all, a juke box, live music concerts, dart boards, and pool tables make for a great entertainment platter; there is never a single dull moment here. While you are in town, do head to The Honest Pint and enjoy Irish hospitality.

Hair of the Dog Pub

"Beers Galore"

A friendly, casual place to go for a drink and a bite to eat among friends is something every city needs. Hair of the Dog Pub is just that for Chattanooga. The food here consists of pub classics which are made from scratch including Rock Shrimp Hushpuppies, Reuben Rolls, Caesar Salad, Fish n' Chips and the Pub Burger. However, it is the sheer variety of beers which are found here which keep people coming back for more. Over 50 types of beer are offered on tap alone with even more varieties being served in bottles.

Big River Grille and Brewing Works

"Chattanooga's own microbrewery"

This fun and lively spot is perfect for entertaining friends or unwinding after work. With eight different brews in their vats at all times, you are sure to find a flavor and body to suit your taste here. From the light Sweet Magnolia to the stout and hearty Iron Horse Dark, you will find micro-brewed nirvana. Pints are $3-$5 depending on the brew. Should you get hungry from lifting all those mugs, there is a complete lunch and dinner menu that rivals any in town. Entrees range from simple burgers and sandwiches to the thick and juicy Drunken Rib-eye ($10.95), a 12-ounce rib-eye marinated in beer and served with veggies and a baked potato.
