Rainbow Stage

"Outdoor Entertainment"

A marvel in itself, the fascinating Rainbow Stage would not have existed if the Winnipeg's Musician Association would not have come together for the necessity of an event stage. A result of experimental architecture, the Rainbow Stage was built in 1952 as an outdoor stage for theater and music concerts. The assembly of lights put on center stage resembled a rainbow and so this incidental wonder came to be known as the Rainbow Stage. This ecstatic stage set in open air, has been playing a host to various important events since then and has been witnessing a crowd not less than 2600. Music concerts, large scale live performances, massive fairs and festivals, are all a frequent happening at this notable attraction of Winnipeg.
