Cafe La Haye

"Tiny Gem"

Cafe La Haye is a tiny yet popular eatery located close to a historic shopping and dining area. The cheerful space exudes an old world charm with its use of mirrors, large windows, and beautiful artwork decorating the walls. Seated here, you can relish food that takes inspiration from various cultures, but retains its American flavor. Try the delicate risotto or the well-made filet Mignon or the mouth-watering chocolate silk cake. A small bar pours glasses of delicious wines from a carefully crafted list, all of which pair well the farm-fresh food.

Mustards Grill

"Deceptively Casual"

Popular wisdom holds that this is the restaurant that kicked off the latest round in the fine dining craze in the North Bay. That may or may not be true. What is a fact is that chef Cindy Pawlcyn, who has since been influential in the creation of many other Bay Area restaurants, started here and is still involved in kitchen operations at her flagship restaurant. The atmosphere at Mustards is upscale roadhouse with an airy dining room and walls that are almost entirely made of windows. The staff is lively and efficient.

Gott's Roadside

"No Reservations Required"

Napa Valley is known for its world-renowned restaurants and wine but little is known about local diamonds like Gott's Roadside. Classic diner food - burgers, fries, onion rings, and shakes - is served. Diner food, however, takes on a new life: fresh, local meats and veggies are used to ensure maximum flavor and quality. Essentially it's a burger stand with a line around the corner. Service is quick and the time spent in line can be used to take in picturesque, quaint St. Helena. All seating is outdoor. In true Napa fashion, wine, as well as beer, is served. The food is reason enough, though the miles of scenic vineyards and rolling hills doesn't hurt, to make the drive up Highway 29.
