Ammolite in the Rockies

"Vibrant Rocks"

Ammolite in the Rockies boasts an exquisite collection of fine jewelry featuring the vibrant and rare gemstone, ammolite. Silver, gold and platinum studded with these colorful gemstones are just a few of the treasures you will find at this store; dinosaur skulls, ammolite fossils and loose ammolite stones are available as well. The store is akin to a mining museum, with exhibits that enumerate on the origins, mining and processing of ammolite that is found along the Eastern slopes of the Rockies. Guided tours of the exhibits can be arranged.

Sulphur Mountain Cosmic Ray Station

"Mountain-Top Laboratory"

The Sulphur Mountain Cosmic Ray Station was built in the year 1956 to facilitate the participation of Canada in the International Geophysical Year of 1957-1958. Although the laboratory ceased operations in 1972 and was dismantled not long after, the site was officially designated a National Historic Site in recognition of its scientific contributions. Although little remains of the historic laboratory, the site is well-marked and offers breathtaking views over the Canadian Rockies. The Sulphur Mountain Cosmic Ray Station is easily accessible via the Sulfur Mountain Trail and is a popular choice amongst hiking enthusiasts. The trail head can be found just off Mountain Avenue.
