Clay Oven Indian Cuisine

"Regionally Flexible Indian Cuisine"

Clay Oven Indian Cuisine is hidden in the corner of the Irvine Village Shopping Center, countering its strip mall location with elegant decor and phenomenal fare. Where other Indian restaurants are behold to certain regional styles and traditional dishes, Clay Oven commands a flexibility in regards to its influences, incorporating unique flavors into otherwise familiar dishes. Goat cheese samosas, habanero vindaloo and paneer anardana, farmers cheese cooked in a pomegranate masala, are just some of the innovative flavors that can wow even the most seasoned of Indian gourmards. The service may be a little stoic, but the cuisine explodes with flavor and personality, making Clay Oven a hot spot for Indian fare.

Natraj Cuisine of India

"Quality Indian Fare"

This is known as a high-ticket Indian restaurant that is still a great value. The atmosphere is low-key and the focus is on the food. The clientele is diverse, with businesspeople stopping in for the popular lunch buffet and others coming in for dinner to enjoy a relaxing meal. There is live music in the evenings, featuring classic Indian melodies. The menu is north Indian, with a heavy focus on lamb and chicken, with dishes curries and vindaloo. The vegetables are also very good and packed with flavor. The tandoori dishes are spectacular and are made in the famous clay oven. Beer and wine are served with a few bottles of wine available in the low-to-medium price range.
