Copper Chimney

"Please Your Taste Buds"

Owned by the same family that runs Handi, Copper Chimney is a multi-cuisine restaurant that has been catering mainly to tourists since 1990. Located close to Sindhi Camp, it has gained popularity for the sheer variety of food offered on the menu. One can savor a humongous portion of Chicken-do-pyaza, or the Rajasthani special gatta, or choose from some Chinese fare like fish in garlic sauce or lemon chicken. Throw in a fine array of wine and beer, and what you have is a consummate dining experience you won't forget in a long time.

Handi

"A Well-known Name"

Around for over two decades now, the family-run Handi restaurant has carved a niche for itself as far as serving Mughlai and Tandoori food is concerned. An inconspicuous entrance makes it easy to confuse this place with some shady road-side eatery, however once you enter, Handi certainly has a different story to tell. Rustic wooden tent-like interiors complement the traditional feast of kebabs and naans (Indian breads) served here. Jaisalmeri Laal Maas, Paneer Tikka and Chicken Kali Mirch are some of the recommended delicacies, that surpass all expectations. A lively ambiance and prompt service results in deservedly packed evenings for this casual eatery. All said and done, Handi is indeed something to look out for in the central area of Jaipur.
