Inn San Francisco

"Victorian Bed & Breakfast"

This unassuming house in the Mission District is really a cozy bed and breakfast. Originally built on what was known in the 1870s as Mansion Row, it was owned by John English, a City Commissioner known as the Potato King. It is now restored to its original Victorian elegance and offers individually decorated bedrooms awash with style. The Inn San Francisco is well equipped with guest friendly amenities and services.

Red Victorian Bed, Breakfast & Art

"Experience Peace & Love"

Red Victorian Bed, Breakfast & Art is a gorgeous, historic B&B located on Haight Street. This lovely red Victorian home (as its name suggests) is a superb tribute to the '60s, with tie-dyed fabrics, a meditation room and various other decor elements that would transport you to a simpler time. Lest you forget what decade you are in, a computer in the lobby invites you to enter your thoughts into a large guest database. Attractions such as Kezar Stadium, Golden Gate Park and Buena Vista Park are all quite nearby. Rooms are well-furnished, with an elegant touch of old-world charm - each of which reflect a theme such as Summer of Love, Flower Child Room and the Peacock Suite, which features an avian motif and a bay window. Needless to say, The Red Victorian makes for an unforgettable stay.
