Auberge Internationale des Jeunes

"Cheap, Basic & Comfortable"

Popular with globetrotters on a limited budget, the rooms here are nothing to shout about, but you get what you pay for. Four-person dorms come with WC and shower and there's a bathroom on each floor for rooms with two or three people. The variety of flags hanging outside the building proves just how international the hostel is. Breakfast (included in the price) is served in the large dining room. French and English-speaking staff are on duty round the clock. It's best to book at least two weeks ahead.

St Christopher's Canal

"Ultra-Modern Hostel"

So named because of its proximity to Canal de l'Ourcq, St Christopher's Canal is a great option for backpackers in Paris. You don't even have to go about exploring all that the 19th arrondissement has to offer by yourself; the hostel organizes free walking tours of the surrounding area. In addition to the usual hostel amenities, this one even has its own basement bar and nightclub, Belushi's. As the hostel has no curfew, you can enjoy the city's nightlife at leisure.
