Salotto 42

"Star-Studded Hangout"

If the owners - a Swedish model and her Italian beau - do not add enough glitter to this bar, the influx of local and international celebrities makes up for it. Settle into funky, stuffed armchairs and enjoy the ambiance of the comfy dining area, designed to look like a posh living-room in a swanky modern home. Salotto 42 also doubles up as a coffee shop for a quick snack or a cup of the steaming brew. There is a smorgasbord of Scandinavian cuisine, with delicious Swedish finger food to choose from. Art and fashion magazines (carelessly strewn about) help to while away time rather than twiddling thumbs.

Hotel Art

"Palatial Paradise"

The fact that Hotel Art is housed in a former seminary is enough for culture buffs to check it out. The ecclesiastical structure is spruced up with stylishly modern lighting and furniture. This contemporary theme extends to the rooms, each of which stands out due to its tasteful palette. Partake of a heavy traditional breakfast or a refreshing herbal tea in the shiny Crystal Bar, cradled in a former chapel. Or soak in the relaxing Turkish bath while toying with warm wisps emanating from the steam room. A fitness center and gym prevent those muscles from getting too lax, while the in-house restaurant proves a worthy pit-stop for a growling belly. The lack of corporate amenities makes this a hotel strictly for tourists and leisure travelers.

Dal Bolognese

"Dining in Piazza del Popolo"

This restaurant looks out onto one of Rome's most beautiful piazzas, in a comfortable, yet refined setting. This restaurant is a local hangout for artists, politicians, journalists and businessmen. It looks onto the piazza del Popolo, and has one room, which resembles a beautiful bourgeois drawing room, and another room for smokers. You will receive a warm reception and efficient service in both. Everything here is absolutely delicious; however, the pasta dishes particularly stand out thanks to their Emilian tradition. Classic dishes are made according to the Bolognese tradition, and the pièce de resistance is Bollito Misto; also excellent is the Fritto alla Bolognese with vegetables, meat, crema dolce and apple. There are fish dishes and homemade pasta recipes.
