Via del Corso

"A Shopper's Paradise"

Via del Corso, one of Rome's most iconic thoroughfares, traces its origins back to ancient times when it served as a bustling commercial route connecting the northern and southern parts of the city. Originally, it was known as Via Flaminia during the time of the Roman Empire, and then went on to be known as Via Lata in the Middle Ages. Here, among other things, you can find elegant palaces dating back to ancient times. Most tourists today love taking a walk down this road only to lose themselves in ancient history and the eclectic mix of shops, boutiques, and cafes.

Via Condotti

"Sober Elegance"

Via dei Condotti is one of the most elegant streets in the capital. It gets its name from conduits that used to take water to the baths of Agrippa near the Pantheon. Lined with an array of high-end boutiques such as Rolex, Swarovski, Jimmy Choo, Bvlgari, and more, this iconic street has long been synonymous with elegance, style, and sophistication. But Via Condotti is more than just a shopping destination. As you stroll along its cobblestone sidewalks, you'll pass by historic palaces, elegant cafes, and chic galleries, each contributing to the street's timeless allure.

Piazzale Ugo La Malfa

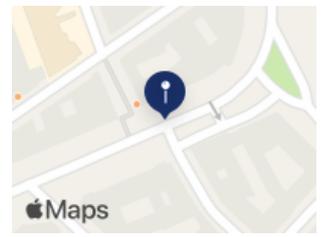

"A Thoughtful Mazzini"

Piazzale Ugo La Malfa, originally known as Piazzale Romolo e Remo, lies not too far from the Aventino hill crossed by the Viale del Circo Massimo. Today it is dedicated to Giuseppe Mazzini, the first man to govern the modern country of Italy. The attractive panorama takes in the Palatine hill in front, the Alban hills in the distance to the right, and the majestic dome of St Peter's to the left. The piazzale also faces the remains of the Circus Maximus. The monument to Mazzini by Ettore Ferrari was inaugurated about 20 years after the centenary of the Roman republic in 1949. The bronze statue stands on a tall marble base decorated with large relief figures. Mazzini is shown seated and in deep thought.

Via Veneto

"A Starry Street"

Via Veneto, immortalized by Federico Fellini's "La Dolce Vita," epitomizes the glamour and allure of Rome's golden age. This iconic boulevard is renowned for its elegant cafes, luxury hotels, and chic boutiques, attracting jet-setters, celebrities, and discerning travelers from around the world. One of the most famous landmarks along Via Veneto is the Hotel Excelsior, which has hosted numerous celebrities and dignitaries over the years. Other notable establishments include Doney and Harry's Bar. Visitors to Via Veneto can enjoy strolling along the wide, tree-lined boulevard, taking in the elegant architecture and soaking up the atmosphere of this iconic Roman street.
