Ear Inn

"Legendary Pub Steeped in History"

Ear Inn is one of the oldest bars in the city. The establishment is a relic of yesteryear, replete with old jugs that date back to the 1800s and memorabilia that is strewn throughout the space. Originally a watering hole for sailors, this eccentric bar is riddled with several ghost stories, making it something of a local legend. The kitchen offers the usual American pub fare with a few brews on tap. A true New York City bar, this is a great place to hang out with friends and enjoy a few pints.

McSorley's Old Ale House

"An Institution for over 150 Years"

McSorley's is a Cooper Union landmark that first opened its doors around the Civil War. It is one of the former operating bars in the city. McSorley's serves two unique beers, McSorley's Lager and McSorley's Cream Stock Ale, and they are served two mugs at a time. Inside, you'll find sawdust on the floor and historic bric-à-brac alongside photos and news clippings. The menu is decent, with delectable appetizers like hearty cheese plates. Just be sure to keep the pub's centuries-old motto in mind: "Be Good or Be Gone!"

Wilfie & Nell

"Cocktails, Conversations, and More"

An establishment better than the usual village pubs located on Thompson and Prince Streets, Wilfie & Nell scores due to the owners still presenting an unpretentious atmosphere. The bar operates on a first come, first serve basis; they don't take reservations but will squeeze in as many people as possible. With the menu more apt for the high-end spots in Soho, the kitchen serves an upscale version of many classics, including the gourmet rendition of the Fried Chicken Sandwich or the thick-cut fries with malted vinegar are crowd favorites. You'll also find Scotch eggs (hard-boiled eggs wrapped in sausage meat), chicken-liver pâté with onion jam, a gastronomic fish & chips, and other small plates that will whet your palate.

Old Town Bar

"Rustic Bar"

Established in 1892 and surviving the Prohibition Era, the Old Town Bar has been serving locals and tourists alike for over a century. Upon entering the bar, patrons are transported back in time with elements such as old booths, tin ceilings, frosted glass, beveled mirrors, and a mahogany bar that add to the charm. And the menu here features everyone's favorites, including burgers, fries, sandwiches, and salads. Not just that, but the bar also boasts an impressive selection of craft beers, wines, and cocktails, making it a favorite spot for happy hour and after-work drinks.

Molly's

"A Casual Irish Pub"

This fun but relaxed Irish pub, complete with Tudor ceilings, iron chandeliers and sawdust on the floors, is a favorite among locals and one of New York City's finest spots to have a pint of Guinness beer. The crowd is very friendly, and the bar is staffed by genuine Irish folk. There are occasionally Irish football matches (soccer to all you Yankees) on the television.

Paddy Reilly's

"Foot Tapping Irish Music Bar"

Paddy Reilly's transports you to Ireland in more than one sense. The decor not only takes inspiration from pubs back in Ireland, but the knotted floorboard has also been taken from an Irish hotel and even the still was made in County Cavan. Live music, mostly traditional Irish, is played throughout the week at the bar. There are bluegrass jams on Sundays and Mondays, Irish pub sessions on Tuesdays and Thursdays, all genres open mic on Wednesdays, The Prodigals playing on Fridays, and singer songwriter open mic and The Raging Hornpipes on Saturdays. And while you are foot tapping to the great music, you can enjoy delicious Guinness, Stella Artois, and rotating drafts.

Landmark Tavern

"Classic Historic Irish Pub"

Established in 1878, the Landmark Tavern is a historic location in New York City. Since its existence, it has been operating at the Hudson waterside, serving generations of people with its exhausting list of whiskey, wine and scrumptious food. The decor is antique and old world with traditional mahogany carved panels, a wooden bar and ornamental mirrors. The wines are sourced from France, Italy, New Zealand, Australia and Chile. The Irish whiskey consists of names like Jameson, Glenfiddich, Glenmorangie and Laphroaig. There are live Irish bands entertaining the guests including the likes of Don Meade. Make sure to visit this landmark pub once, if only to catch a sighting of the resident Confederate veteran.
