Neptune Oyster

"Nice Catch"

Neptune was God of the Seas, but the Neptune Oyster however isn't as vast as the waters he ruled over. This is a small pearl that can seat about two dozen people in simple and neat surroundings. Apart from oysters and clams, you'll get a variety of other seafood and if you're in to it, you can try some smoked and raw salmon. You can also savor some Italian seafood like North End Cioppino and Whole Loup de Mer.

Legal Sea Foods

"A Boston Tradition"

Legal Sea Foods is synonymous with great seafood in Boston. Boasting a traditional clam chowder that has been served at five presidential inaugurations, this restaurant also offers a light chowder for diet-conscious diners. Steamed lobster dinners are always a good choice, or any of their other dishes made from their selection of 30 fresh fish varieties offered daily, served baked, broiled, steamed or fried. Raw shellfish, salads and vegetables are also available. Legal Sea Foods has a mail-order service, function space and catering. This seafood hot spot has locations throughout Boston and other cities around the country, but this location at Long Wharf offers stunning oceanside views.

Legal Harborside – Floor 1

"Something's Fishy!"

House within a former fish market, the Legal Harborside on Floor 1 takes great pride in offering itself as an authentic seafood diner. This restaurant has a menu that comprises of a variety of seafood, with a blend of pizzas and pastas. Experience the feel of eating on one of the picnic tables, or you can watch the bartenders at work at the Oyster bar. The patio seating in the restaurant gives you a beautiful view of the Boston Fish Pier and the city skyline. Make sure to visit this fish market and refresh all your old memories.

Atlantic Fish Company

"Good Chowdah"

Atlantic Fish Company on Boylston Street has earned first place at the city's annual Chowderfest. The atmosphere is casual and the bar is lively. Once little more than a hole-in-the-wall, it is now an upscale space with warm wood trim and intimate booths. Choose from a variety of seafood entrees that are fresh and well-prepared. Fried clams, an overflowing lobster roll and blackened salmon are the seafood favorites at the Atlantic Fish Company. Chicken and steak are also available for the land lovers, however vegetarian options are sparse.
