Le Diplomate

"Classic French"

Le Diplomate brings a piece of France to Washington, DC. The restaurant brings to mind a quaint French cafe, with all the offerings of one to boot - imagine lounging around on a lazy Sunday, munching on a warm croissant while sipping on some coffee. For brunch, the menu includes dishes like Eggs Benedict and Poached Eggs Basquaise. During lunch, try the French onion soup and Croque-Madam - a sandwich consisting of grilled ham, fried egg, and rosemary aioli. And for dinner, don't miss out on the steak au poivre, steak garnished with garlic spinach.

Lauriol Plaza

"A Lively Favorite"

This is a festive restaurant, well loved for many years by neighborhood patrons. The restaurant has a delightful rooftop terrace for alfresco dining. The dining room has the look and feel of a cozy cafe. The decor is simple, with white walls, white tablecloths and gilt-framed paintings. Blending Spanish, Mexican and Tex-Mex traditions, the menu is strong on fajitas and grilled entrees. Classic paellas and the marinated pork dishes are also excellent.
