Whiskey Girl

"Live Music Bar"

For a dose of live music while having your local American grub, head to Whiskey Girl. The club resembles Hard Rock Cafe with its set of nightly bands performing with enough vigor to make you sit back, tap your feet and clap for every song asking for more. The odd nights also have DJs spinning some fine tunes from their collection. There are ample televisions to keep you entertained with ongoing sports matches if the music isn't of your liking. The American cuisine dominated menu features an array of burgers, sandwiches, salads, classic pub appetizers, pizza and more. Their Sunday brunch is also noteworthy!

Sing along or just enjoy the excitement with some drinks and food. The restaurant is also available for private parties, events and receptions.

Urban Mo's

"A Little Bit Country"

Urban Mo's offers a western theme with a twist. There is plenty of activity as people kick up their heels on the large dance floor. But it is not just country music here. Sunday nights are busy during "Detour," the weekly dance music night. Mondays are Latino night. Every night of the week is fun and crowded. Whether you like country music or not, this is a good time for everyone.

Cueva Bar

"Pat that Empanada"

Part of a trend on Adams Avenue, this tiny Argentinian-infused wine bar offers another alternative to the popular Mexican Mayahuel Bar up the street. But its natural companion may end up being the French-flavored Farmhouse directly next door. Empanadas rule the menu and are unlike any served elsewhere - chicken in a curry-infused dough, anyone? The empanadas are baked to order, rather than fried. They also offer a variety of flatbreads. The unexpected pita bread and hummus appetizer is created to order, as are most of the menu items. - deTraci Regula
