Barclay Hotel

"Comfy, Elegant & Affordable"

If you prefer your hotels simple, elegant and affordable, this Downtown lodging is probably for you. Located right on Robson Street, the city's version of Rodeo Drive, the Barclay Hotel is a European-style heritage building with a soothing and homey decor, and large and eclectically decorated rooms. Stay here and your shopping, gallery-going, cuisine-sampling and people-watching quotient goes off the scale. Another plus is that it is close to Stanley Park, the Vancouver Aquarium, Gastown and virtually every other major city attraction.

Sylvia Hotel

"Old English Legacy"

A classic fixture in Vancouver's West End, this hotel is a historic landmark. Its traditional European-style facade is almost completely obscured by ivy. Constructed in 1912, it was originally one of the tallest apartment buildings in the city. It was later converted to a hotel during the Great Depression of 1929 and re-named after the builder's daughter. The dark wood interiors evoke the old European feel. The building's beach side location offers ocean views and access. Sitting across from English Bay, it is a short distance from Stanley Park.
