Amadeus

"Relaxing Over A Drink"

Amadeus attracts a city's major crowd of people who love relaxing and devouring great food. Here, you will be served traditional Swabian dishes like Maultaschen or Käsespätzle, as well as contemporary selections including salad and a pizza. The best time of the year to visit the Amadeus is during the summer, when you can enjoy its huge inner courtyard. If you're lucky, you might be there when a local jazz or funk band play live. Be sure to swing by in the mornings for their brunch specials.

Deli

"Deli in Stuttgart"

This spot isn't much like what visitors from North America might expect from the name. Far from a deli, it is primarily a place to enjoy drinks, although there are a few dishes available too. During the week the crowd at the Deli is mostly mixed, with business people hanging out besides biker-types, but on the weekend the patrons are noticeably more upscale. That might be explained in part by the drinks available; generally wine, with beer limited to somewhat some drafts and bottles. There's lots of room outdoors during warm weather, although after midnight regulations require that people come inside.
