

"Best Local Cuisine in Tokyo"

Created By: Cityseeker

 15 Locations Bookmarked

 by jonathanvalencia5

Renga-tei

"A Tokyo Institution"

Renga-tei is unique in that it has managed to thrive in Tokyo since 1895. One urban legend has it that Renga-tei invented tonkatsu but even if that isn't true, they were definitely the pioneers of rice on the plate with the meat, instead of a bowl, and they also were the first to garnish their tonkatsu with the now ubiquitous shredded cabbage. Aside from their perfectly cooked tonkatsu, Renga-tei serves battered deep fried oysters in the winter, a long-time popular dish. Eat here for a golden sample of Tokyo's illustrious culinary past.

 +81 3 3561 3882

 www.ginza.jp/en/shop/894

 3-15-16 Ginza, Chuo-ku, Tokyo

 by jonathanvalencia5

Ponta Honke

"Top-notch Tonkatsu"

Ponta Honke is one of Tokyo's highest praised tonkatsu restaurants. Tonkatsu has the honor of being loved equally by locals and foreigners and at Ponta Honke, you can dine on some of the finest pork cutlet that the city has to offer. They are simultaneously tender and crispy, thanks to the cooking method; the deep-fat frying is done at a low temperature first and then the cutlets are finished off in extremely hot oil. Portions are huge. Wash your tonkatsu down with a glass of cold beer for a satisfying evening meal.

 +81 3 3831 2351

 3-23-3 Ueno, Tokyo

 by "Vinicius Bedit on Unsplash" on Unsplash

Jubako

"Eel-y, eel-y good"

It's hard to argue with over 200 years of history; Jubako has been serving unagi for that long. Unagi (eel) used to be a delicacy for the very rich; now it's accessible to everyone - you can get delicious eel at pretty much any sushi or sashimi restaurant. Jubako has only a set menu, which serves various forms of cooked eel (broiled, baked, plain) alongside abalone and stewed carp. It's a great restaurant to check out for some authentic, historic Japanese flavor; eat on the floor traditional Japanese-style or, if this doesn't appeal, you can book a Western-style table.

 +81 3 3583 1319

 2-17-61 Akasaka, Minato-ku, Tokyo

Komuro

"Authentic Kaiseki Experience"

Mitsuhiro Komuro's restaurant was honored with two Michelin stars, reflecting and rewarding the chef's attention to detail and skill with the incredible kaiseki cuisine (Japanese multi-course dinner). Dinner at Komuro includes specialties such as conger eel or, in the summer, matsutake mushrooms harvested from forests in western Japan. The restaurant is tiny, and the seating is limited. Book a counter seat, where you can have an informal chat with the chef and marvel at his skills as he prepares your meal.

+81 3 3235 3332

kaiseki-komuro.jp/

35-4 Wakamiyachō, Tokyo

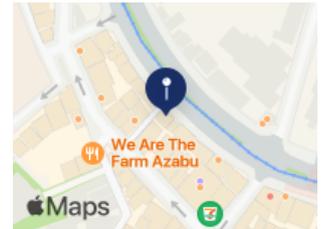

by Syced ©

Yukimura

"A Taste of Kyoto"

Yukimura is an unpretentious restaurant tucked away in Azabu-Juban. Adorned with three Michelin Stars, the restaurant has earned an international reputation for its creative delicacies. A blend of modern aesthetics and traditional styles of cooking, Chef Jun Yukimura's Kyoto-inspired cuisine is a delightful treat to be experienced. Featuring seasonal ingredients like fresh fish, sea urchins, and crabs, Yukimura brings out the best of Kyoto. Try the matsutake mushrooms, wrapped in eel and grilled over coals; or the grilled bamboo shoots, cooked until perfectly tender. Jun Yukimura is rightly celebrated as one of Japan's most innovative chefs and if you are lucky enough to get a seat, you are guaranteed a meal of unrivaled finesse.

+81 3 5772 1610

1-5-5 Azabu Juban, 3rd Floor, Takayanagi Building, Tokyo

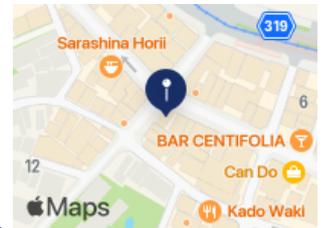

by HirokazuTouwaku ©

Azabu Ichigo

"Winter Comfort"

Other than shabu shabu, hot pots aren't the first thing that people tend to associate with Japanese cuisine. A visit to Azabu Ichigo should cure you of any doubts; their oden is carefully prepared using eight different flavored broths and the freshest ingredients. Many Japanese people eat steaming bowls of oden from street-carts but Azabu Ichigo takes a modest concept and elevates it. The dark wood of the interior and the cozy counter space gives the restaurant a feeling of calm in the midst of a busy shopping area. The only Michelin starred oden restaurant in Tokyo, Azabu Ichigo is not to be missed.

+81 3 5772 2936

www.azabu-ichigo.com/

2-5-14 Azabu-juban, Minato-ku, Tokyo

by takedahrs ©

lidaya

"Dojou Like Fish?"

lidaya, an Edo-style restaurant that is redolent of Tokyo's ancient past, serves up dojou, a local freshwater fish that is virtually unknown outside of Japan. It is a flavorful, surprisingly robust little fish, that gives good flavor to lidaya's specialty dish, dojou-nabe (dojou hot-pot). If you're a little squeamish about fish bones, it is possible to order a boneless version of dojou-nabe. Private rooms, with traditional tatami style seating, are available. lidaya is a culinary step back in time and the Edo-style decor reflects this; this restaurant is popular with locals so be sure to call in advance.

+81 3 3843 0881

3-3-2 Nishiasakusa, Tokyo

by sharonang

Hachiku

"Superb Sushi"

Hachiku is famous for its Osaka-style (boxed) sushi, perfectly made at this tiny establishment. As there are only four tables, most customers choose to get take-out. Try the chakin-sushi, rice is mixed with eel, pickled gourd, lotus and minced fish then wrapped in a thin layer of omelet. For the experimental types, get a sushi variety box, which is a great way to sample many of the twenty or so flavors. Hachiku has been open for eighty years now and continues to set a very high standard for Osaka-style sushi.

+81 3 3351 8989

3-11 Yotsuya, Shinjuku-ku, Tokyo

by sharonang

Obana

"It's Eel-y Worth the Wait"

Obana has been a local favorite through five generations of owners; it serves generous portions of incredibly fresh, delicious unagiya. Even better, the eels are caught in the wild, not farmed. There is often a line so be prepared to wait and as the restaurant follows the ancient traditions of preparing and cooking the fish, there is a considerable wait after you have ordered. But it is truly worth it and it's a great opportunity to eat authentic, age-old Japanese cuisine with a dining room full of enthusiastic locals. Private rooms are also available for groups.

+81 3 3803 1839

5-33-1 Minamisenju, Tokyo

by Irenna86

Fish House Oyster Bar

"Catch Your Fill of Shellfish"

For delicious oysters, the Fish House Oyster Bar is your best bet. With oysters from Canada, America, and a plethora of local varieties, there are as many varieties as there are ways to chomp them down. Besides oysters, clam chowders, cheese platters and several other menu choices are also available. This one-room joint also offers a thoughtful variety of oyster-friendly wines and beers. Whether you believe in the power of the oyster or not, if you are a fan, aficionado, or just want to see what all the fuss is about, then the Fish House Oyster Bar is a great place to start.

+81 3 6416 1391

oyster-bar.jp

1-3-11 Ebisunishi, Belle Ebisu M1F, Tokyo

by takedahrs

Tokyo Mentsudan

"Noodle Nosh"

Simplicity is key when it comes to udon noodles - the noodles themselves - thick and chewy - are the stars of the dish and Tokyo Mentsudan upholds this principle. One of the owners, Kazutoshi Tao, is the chief of an udon fan club, giving you an idea of just how seriously the restaurant takes its noodles. The restaurant is self-service - you choose your own noodles, toppings and side dish. Highly recommended is the kamatama; noodles are served in a scaldingly hot shallow dish and an egg is cracked over the top. Add some soy sauce and you have the very essence of delicious udon simplicity.

+81 3 5389 1077

www.mentsudan.com/shop/shop_tokyo.html

7-9-15 Nishishinjuku, 1F Daikan Plaza Business Kiyoda Building, Tokyo

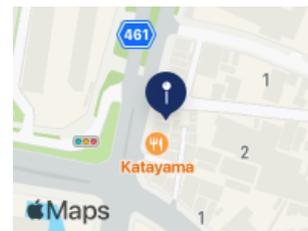

by jojomild

Katayama

"Showa Nostalgia"

The Showa period lasted for over sixty years, ending in 1989. During this time, Western food exploded in popularity in Japan; spaghetti, omelet and rice) and hamburgers became very popular and many Japanese view these foods as nostalgic childhood treats. Katayama has a wide range of these dishes, guaranteeing the restaurant's continuing popularity. One of the most popular dishes is dabincho which is a 'Da Vinci' cut steak; a rump steak that has somehow had all the fibers removed, leaving behind a flavorful, tender piece of meat. In the winter, you can order a serving of juicy, deep-fried oysters. You cannot make reservations so be prepared to queue, particularly at weekends.

+81 3 3610 1500

dabintyo.jp/

4-2-6 Higashimukojima, Tokyo

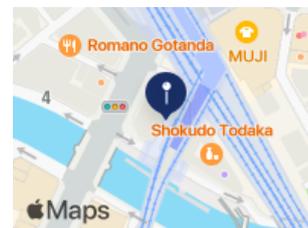

by "Vinicius Benedit on Unsplash" on Unsplash

Takahashi

"Champion Chicken"

Takahashi only recently opened but it was to great buzz, as it was helmed by Yuji Takahashi, a well-respected French-trained chef. He has chosen a rather different path at his new restaurant; it's a yakitoriya. Yakitoriyas specialize in skewering and roasting pieces of chicken, taken from anywhere on the bird. Takahashi uses a special breed of organically raised fighting cocks, whose deep, gamey flavor caught the attention of Michelin judges in 2010. As is typical of a French-disciplined chef, a quality, extensive wine list is available. The restaurant is closed the 1st and 3rd Monday of each month.

+81 3 5436 9677

1-7-1 Nishigotanda, DescriptionShinjuku, Tokyo

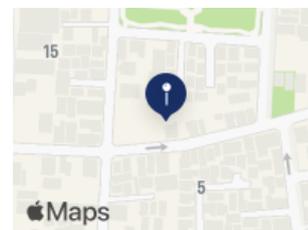

by Jpatokal

Sutamina-en

"Barbecue Bonanza"

Korean barbecue, ubiquitous in its home country, is greatly popular in Japan. It's a fantastic way of dining communally - you cook a cut of marinated meat on a charcoal grill at your table, dip it in soy sauce and enjoy the smoky tenderness of the meat. At Sutamina-en - sutamina is Japanese for stamina - there are many cuts of meat, many of which you are unlikely to find anywhere else; cow's Adam's apple is one you're unlikely to forget. Sutamina-en draws hordes of enthusiastic Japanese diners so be prepared to wait.

+81 3 3897 0416

www.sutaminaen.com/index.html

3-13-4 Shikahama, Tokyo

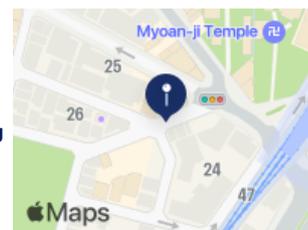

by annieyuri

Ni Hao Honten

"Gyoza Here for Great Dumplings"

China has dim sum, Korea has mandu - Japan also has a thriving dumpling culture. Japanese people love gyoza, which are fried, meaty dumplings - extremely tasty and well seasoned. At Ni-Hao, you can get excellent dumplings for bargain prices; the house specialty is the 'winged' gyoza which are cooked in a lightly floured wok and gives the dumplings fine, crunchy 'wings'. When your plate of perfectly browned gyoza arrive, dip one into the ponzu sauce and delight in the savory perfection.

+81 3 3734 2180

nihao.co.jp/

info@nihao.co.jp

4-24-14 Kamata, Tokyo

JOIN US AT:

TERMS & CONDITIONS

PRIVACY POLICY

API

CONTACT US

Copyright (C) 2024 CITYSEEKER

