Albatross

"Drink the Japanese Way"

A quaint watering hole in the bustling neighborhood of Shinjuku, Albatross is a great place to share a few drinks with friends. While finding the bar might be a task, once you're here, all your efforts will be worth it. Though a little cramped, but with the Baroque style decorations, glistening chandeliers and an intimate vibe, this bar never fails to make each visit memorable. Its well-stocked bar boasts of an impressive collection of spirits, wine, and beers from around the world. You could also have a shot at the local sake, shochu, and umeshu, for an experience of Tokyo's own spirits.

Araku

"Sake, Cocktails and More"

A cozy little bar in a bustling street, Araku is a great place to catch up with friends over a round of drinks. Dimly-lit and rather small, with currency notes and pieces of post-its bearing fascinating messages from travelling customers from around the world, the ambiance of this bar is perfect to unwinding with a drink. Boasting an impressive selection of spirits and beers, you are certain to find a drink of your taste here. Along with great distilled spirits and brews, this bar also features a commendable selection of cocktails.
