Connaught Place

"Shop Till You Drop"

Also known as Rajiv Chowk, Connaught Place was built in 1931. This extensive complex is made up of three concrete circles of colonnaded arcades and is the heart of New Delhi. A busy commercial hub, it is also has endless shopping stores selling everything under the sun. You can find imported electronic goods, sports gear, rare artifacts, books, clothing, household items, etc. It is an explorer's paradise, with every corner hiding an exotic shop which is bound to surprise you. Great atmosphere and buzzing with activity, it's worth spending an entire day here.

Bian

"Upscale Designer Boutique"

If you are looking for an elegant cocktail dress or gorgeous salwar suit to wear to a social gathering, Bian is the place to come to. Conceptualized by New York-based designer, Gurmeet Pia Fleming, each item in this shop is a delight. Crystal and lace-based saris, specially designed for weddings, can also be found here. Located conveniently in the Main Market in Lodhi Colony, this is a must visit if you don't mind spending some money for fabulous designs.

Hauz Khas Village

"Antiques & Artifacts"

A true example of India in flux - modernity surrounded by the traditional. This place was actually a village (still is, in the middle of post South Delhi), but then became a popular place for designers to open shop in. There is a relaxed informality about Hauz Khas Village, with high-end designer shops and restaurants strewn in midst of a rural landscape. You can find an impressive range in fashion ensembles, carpets, old silver antiques, furniture and artifacts that use traditional techniques. Don't be surprised by cow herds resting for hours outside a designer cafe. That's what the Village is all about.

Rohit Bal

"Latest Trends in Fashion"

One of the leading designers of the country, Rohit Bal's work has been appreciated not only in his homeland but all over the world. His designs always have an element of surprise, whether it's the use of different fabrics or dramatic colors. He is probably the only Indian designer who gives as much attention to men's wear as he does to women's wear, which is why his collections always have such great variety. The men's jackets and traditional Indian sherwanis are a must buy while visiting this flagship store in Delhi, even if it means that you have to drop everything else on your shopping list.
