Esther Perbandt

"Androgynous Fashion"

Known for her distinctly androgynous and minimalist designs, impeccable tailoring, and ingenious use of fabric, Esther Perbandt has made a name for herself amongst women of substance and style. The aesthetic behind each design is a reflection of the designer's own sense of style, creating a collection that defies definition in terms of gender. Subtle hues and clean lines characterize a collection which is composed of both clothing and accessories. Inspired by the city, empowered by experience and enriched by an artistic bent of mind, Esther Perbandt is a fashion label for those who want to make a statement. The Esther Perbandt studio in Berlin also offers custom tailoring services.

Hackesche Höfe

"Beautiful Courtyard"

The Hackesche Höfe has been a center for food and entertainment since its construction in 1906. Before World War II, this area was known for its Jewish theaters and cultural institutions and later became a great place for shops, cafes, underground bars and restaurants. This historic courtyard complex in the Scheuenviertel consists of eight courtyards and houses cultural establishments, businesses and firms. These also include theaters, shops, bars and restaurants. The courtyard is the largest of its kind in Berlin, and makes for a lovely getaway.

Golden Gate

"Night Life of Berlin"

Attracting the young crowd of the city, Golden Gate Club is a funky hangout spot for all the party animals. It is a little difficult to find the entrance of the club, but once you're in, you are sure to enjoy the different genres of music being played. The two-storied structure boasts a very chic, shabby look with secondhand furniture used for the decor and the atmosphere is perfect for a fun-filled night out.

Zagreus Projekt

"Edible Art"

The Zagreus Projekt explores artistic and social concepts through traditional and contemporary art work alongside culinary creations. Artists are invited to create installations and artwork at the gallery, inspired by which a complementary menu is designed and served to the gallery's discerning clientele. The culinary and artistic aspects of each installation are born of collaboration between the chefs and the artists to create a cohesive whole. From traditional recipes to contemporary techniques, the gallery showcases a range that is astoundingly varied, engaging the audience in an immersive experience. Brain-child of Ulrich Krauss, the Zagreus Projekt offers an experience that should not be missed by those who appreciate art in all its forms.

Spa de Rome

"Relájense en el Lujo"

El Spa de Rome, situado en el Hotel de Rome, es el mejor sitio para vivir un día de mimos y cuidados de belleza. Cada paso del tratamiento, desde los productos de calidad hasta la atención y el servicio personalizados, hace que los huéspedes se sientan parte de la realeza. Los tratamientos como el Facial Linfático Rose Crystal, la Fuente de la Juventud y los masajes Tailandés y Rendición prometen rejuvenecer hasta a los más estresados y cansados. Lo mejor del spa, sin ninguna duda, es la piscina de 20 metros de largo. Sumérjense y refrésquense o simplemente relájense junto a ella en las comodísimas reposeras. El ambiente sereno y tranquilo los afectará de forma positiva.

Gewölbesauna

"Steam Your Worries Away"

Let your worries float away on a cloud of steam at the Gewölbesauna. This delightful getaway lies hidden away in a basement along Fröbelstraße where few would expect to find a spa. During summer, the outdoor area invites you to linger and soak in some sunshine after a relaxing steam and massage. The Finnish sauna offers the most intense experience, while the herbal sauna, with its fragrant infusions, is a treat for those who prefer a milder temperature. The vaulted oasis also features a steam room, a chilled plunge pool and a snack bar. Whats more, the Gewölbesauna offers access to all of this and more at a price that is more than fair.

Victoria Insurance

"Architectural Treasure"

This magnificent neo-baroque building was constructed over a period of 20 years beginning in 1893, and was once home to the offices of the Victoria Insurance, or Victoria Versicherung. Rich ornamentation, intricate sculptures and lavish details adorn the facade of this architectural gem, one of the few to have survived relatively unscathed by WWII. Although the building now houses a media academy and various other private institutions, and is, as such, not open to the public, the beautiful baroque courtyard of the historic Victoria Versicherung remains open to all. Heartily adorned with intricate ornamentation, the courtyard is an architectural and artistic marvel that few know of. The courtyard also features an astronomical clock and is just a few steps away from the Jewish Museum.

East German Watchtower

"Hidden Watch Tower"

Not many people are aware of the East German Watchtower but it is worth a visit for a slice of Berlin's history. The tower house was constructed in 1966 as an observation deck for border guards. Today, it is accessible to the general public and is ideal for photo ops. It is located on a quiet street off Potsdamer Platz but it is an incredible spot to explore and climb up the gray, polygonal watch-tower. If you are lucky, volunteers may take you on a short tour and narrate the fascinating history behind the tower. Besides enjoying a panoramic view of the surrounding streets dotted with old German buildings, photography enthusiasts can take a series of snapshots. This tower can accommodate only four visitors at one time.

Phoenix Sculpture of the Philharmonie

"Rising From the Ashes"

Perched above the undulating roof of the Philharmonie is a phoenix, designed and created by the sculptor Hans Uhlmann. The mythical phoenix has long been a symbol of rebirth and perseverance, and in its sculpted form pays homage to the rise of the Philharmonie and the city of Berlin from the rubble left behind by the Nazis and Allied Forces. Although emblematic of the city's rebirth, few know of the existence of the Phoenix as it is visible from only a few vantage points. The higher up you are, the more likely you are to spot it, although its wings can be viewed from Tiergartenstrasse, near the northern side of the building.

Loftus Hall

"A Techno Party"

A venture by an Irish trio, Loftus Hall is the place to be if you're into techno and house music. Although named after a supposedly haunted mansion in the owners' native country, there's nothing ominous about this nightspot, and you are sure to enjoy a night of drinking and dancing. Some of the best DJs in town can be found spinning tracks here.

About Blank

"Electro Underground"

Hidden away behind the grungy facade of an old building, About Blank boasts two dance floors and a never-say-die attitude. The music oscillates between techno and house, with occasional bass and hip-hop numbers. A large garden forms the club's third, unofficial dance floor, with bonfires in the winter to keep the crowd warm. Devoid of glitz and glamor, About Blank embodies the very soul of Berlin's gritty nightlife. The party starts late and often continues well into the next day. The music reigns supreme at About Blank, capturing the attention of true fans of Techno/House.

Tempelhofer Feld

"Old Airport-Turned-Park"

Built-in the years 1936 to 1941, Tempelhofer Freiheit was originally called Tempelhofer Flughafen when it was an airport. Although it was just an airport it played an important role in history. The airport saw forced labour during World War II and it was here that American cargo planes landed with food for starving West Berliners in the Berlin Airlift of 1948-49. During the Cold War, it was an important US airforce base and remained Berlin's main airport until the opening of Tegel Airport in 1975. Nowadays, the airport has closed and it has been transformed into a strange and spooky park that people can wander through. Visitors are welcome to explore the old buildings on a tour or check out the grounds and have a perfect picnic and fun day out with their family and loved ones.

Spreepark

"Abandoned Amusement Park"

Though Spreepark closed its doors in 2001, this defunct amusement park still attracts hordes of visitors from all over. When it had opened in 1969, it was East Germany's sole amusement park and a popular spot. Now all you can see are remnants of its glorious days as you get a glimpse of abandoned rides such as the Ferris wheel and water slide, an amphitheater and canal networks. The city offers guided tours at times but thrill seekers who want to explore this place try to sneak in through its fenced border. During summers, the old amphitheater hosts concerts and theater for children and adults alike.

Gärten der Welt

"Culturally Themed Gardens"

Set inside the Erholungspark Marzahn, Gärten der Welt is comprised of beautiful themed gardens. These lovely landscapes are predominantly inspired by the flora of Asia. The first garden to open in the park was Chinese-themed in the year 2000. Stroll through the Japanese, Korean, Balinese, Oriental and Italian gardens and you will be amazed by their unique beauty. From having unique structures using Chinese, Korean and Italian architecture depending on the respective themes, to astounding fountains and artistic statues, the park is an engineering marvel. Ideal for going on a picnic with family, the park has a strict no pets and bikes policy.

Militärhistorisches Museum der Bundeswehr - Flugplatz Berlin-Gatow

"German Air Force Museum"

Militärhistorisches Museum der Bundeswehr - Flugplatz Berlin-Gatow is situated in what was a Royal Air Force base in the far west of the city, before German reunification. British aircrafts landed here with essential supplies during the Berlin Airlift of 1947. After Allied forces left Berlin in the 1990s, the German Air Force took over the base and promptly turned it into a museum dedicated to military history. This hidden gem of a museum boasts a massive collection of over 600,00 exhibits, including 214 aircraft, 5,000 sets of uniforms and a number of equipment covering a hundred years of German aviation. In addition to the permanent collection, the museum organizes special exhibitions on topics related to military history.
