Martin Luther King, Jr. Park

"So Much Inside This Park"

Formerly known as the Humboldt park, Martin Luther King, Jr. Park was established in the year 1977. The years of history left behind still lingers on quite expressively in the Science Museum situated inside the Martin Luther King, Jr. Park. However, more than the museum, what is more striking about this park is its large wading pool that serves as a pleasing retreat during the summers.

Tift Nature Preserve

"Unique Urban Nature Reserve"

Located three miles from downtown Buffalo on the Lake Erie shoreline, this unique urban nature reserve offers 264-acre (106 hectares) of trails, anachronistic boardwalks and a marsh. This preserve is the environmental education site for the Buffalo Museum of Science and it's perfect for bird-watching, hiking, and family picnics—not to mention snowshoeing and cross-country skiing during the cold winters. In the 1950s, the site was used as a refuse dump, but thankfully it was converted to a nature preserve in the 1980s. Admission is free but donations are requested.
