Johnny Burrito

"Best Burritos Around"

Catering to the lunchtime crowd, Johnny Burrito (JB for short) is set up to crank out cheap, good Mexican food. The menu doesn't get past burritos and nacho salads, but if that wasn't what you wanted, then why did you come? Whatever you do get, don't let the speed with which it's produced fool you -- you will be satisfied. The restaurant closes early and isn't open on weekends, so go while you can. The website lets you fax in orders, and they'll deliver if you want at least 10 burritos.

Mert's Heart and Soul

"Southern-Fried Takeout"

This uptown takeout kitchen supplies the working people of Charlotte's Center City with all the southern-fried soul food they can eat. Choose from staples like blackened pork chops, salmon cakes, or a plate of fried chicken. Mert's also features a selection of "Low Country favorites" like shrimp and grits, fried catfish, and soft shell crab on a hoagie bun. Eating on the run? Opt for a Po' Boy sandwich of shrimp or fish. See website for full menu and online ordering.

Pinky's West Side Grill

"Meat and Veg Coexist"

Pinky's Westside Grill is great addition to Charlotte's dining scene. Located in Ashley Park, it is renowned for its diverse menu that caters to meat-eaters, vegetarians and vegan clientele alike. On offer are American diner classics like salads, burgers and sandwiches, as well as an array of deep fried specialties. The One and Only (Charlotte's first vegetarian corn dog) and Nature Boy (veggie burger) are best-sellers.

Zada Jane's

"Popular Breakfast Spot"

This colorfully-decorated restaurant is the neighborhood favorite for hearty breakfasts and easy lunches. The menu epitomizes Southern comfort food done well, albeit with a contemporary twist. Their locally-sourced, market-fresh ingredients ensure each dish tastes its best. Choose from options like the Organic Shamrock Salad, Green Mindmelt, Pickney Street Pancakes and Meatloaf Burger. Pair your meal with refreshing drinks like the passion fruit iced tea; most of their soft drinks come with endless refills. Their patio is ideal for lively Sunday brunches
