📍 9 Posizioni indicati

Ed Mirvish Theatre

"The Phantom of Toronto"

Ideally situated opposite the Eaton Centre, the Ed Mirvish Theatre is billed as Toronto's finest vaudeville house in the 1920s. The façade has changed along with the players that take to its stage. Now, after being a comic theater house, motion picture palace and a contemporary cinema, it has been returned to the look that first made it famous.

Elgin and Winter Garden Theatre Centre

"Original Vaudeville"

Declared a national historic site in 1982, this structure represents the last stacked Edwardian theater in the world, meaning one theater on top of the other. It was built in 1913 as the first of the Loews vaudeville theatre chain. Located downstairs, the 1,500-seat Elgin Theatre makes for a lavish gathering with royal boxes and charming gilded plaster details. The upstairs 1,000-seat Winter Garden features trompe-l'oeil paintings of pastoral scenes and a spectacular fireproof garden hanging from the roof. Catch some of the most awaited theater productions at this spectacular venue.

Royal Alexandra Theatre

"Productions with Pizzazz"

This grand theater house, Royal Alexandra Theatre, is worth seeing for its architecture and opulence as well as for the entertainment. Built in 1907 and pulled out of the demolition doldrums by Ed Mirvish, the Royal Alex, as locals call it; exudes old-fashioned charm while providing a state-of-the-art theatrical experience. Be seated by a waist-coated usher, sink into the lush red-velvet chairs and see everything from famous Broadway to local talent.

Factory Theatre

"A Working-Class Production"

In existence since 1970, this "factory" makes drama and not widgets. One of nine venues for the annual Fringe of Toronto festival, this space produces grassroots theater at its best and features such Canadian icons as George F Walker and Ken Gass. Situated in a converted church, the theater consists of two performance halls. The 200-seat main space resembles a sanctuary while the 100-seat Studio Café has the audience sitting at small tables close to the stage.
