Zugspitze

"Wetterstein Mountains' Highest Peak"

Zugspitze is the highest mountain range in Germany and a famous ski resort. The mountain stands at an impressive 2,962 meters (9717 feet) above sea level. The area has a variety of activities and attractions to offer both skiers and non-skiers. While the ski enthusiasts might take to the snow-covered slopes of the white mountain, for the non-skiers, there is a tranquil igloo village and Germany's highest church to visit. Cable cars run up and down the mountain, making the peak accessible to skiers and non-skiers alike.

Watzmann Peak

"Third Tallest Mountain of Germany"

Watzmann Peak towers 2,713 meters (8,900 feet) above the surrounding Bavarian landscape. This mountain is the third tallest in Germany and is situated within Berchtesgaden National Park. Directly below the knife-like edge of the mountain's east face lies the icy Watzmann glacier; on this western side of this icy patch lie the remains of a transport-bomber plane that crashed here in 1940. Watzmann Peak is notorious mountain climbing area. Avid mountain climbers peak normally ascend from June to September, until the paths get too slick and dangerous. Several lookout points in the national park offer spectacular views of the mountain peak.

Nebelhorn

"Marvel At Alpine Massif"

Rising to a height of 2,224 meters (7,297 feet), Nebelhorn got its name from Nebelhorn Classics, which is a race event and also the Nebelhorn Trophy figure skating competition. a popular hiking destination, the important thing to remember about climbing this place is that it must be attempted with a 'Klettersteig set' i.e. special equipment. The biggest feature here is that from here spectacular views of Alpine Massif can be enjoyed.
