Jericho Beach

"Perfect for Family Picnics"

This is a large and long sandy stretch with views of the mountains and downtown. It's a great place to take the family for a summertime barbecue or picnic. Located right near the Jericho Youth Hostel, this place is popular but never too crowded. A known spot for sailing, windsurfing and sea kayaking, it offers plenty to do. Find concession stands, change rooms and showers. This is also the site of the annual Vancouver Folk Festival.

Pacific Spirit Regional Park

"Undisturbed Forest in the City"

Spread in unencumbered glory across 763 hectares (1885 acres) of Vancouver's westernmost edge, the lush Pacific Spirit National Park is bounded by the University of British Columbia. The park is famous for its rich tapestry of walking and hiking trails, a mesmerizing network of 54 kilometers (33.5 miles) lined with incredibly tall trees and occasional sun-dappled walkways. Of these, 38 kilometers (24 miles) of the trail's network are allotted for multiple activities, including cycling and horseback riding. Indigenous plants and regional wildlife can be spotted across the park's wild belt, affirming the rich habitat it boasts of. The park's western edge reveals a sandy stretch of the stunning Wreck Beach, a 7.8-kilometer-(4.8-mile-) long naturist beach that invites droves of tourists during summertime.

Spanish Banks

"Large Recreation Facility"

Possibly the city's least crowded beach, this is a great place to go to appreciate the sea's wonder in peace and quiet. This is a long stretch of clean and sandy waterfront in West Point Grey. It is family-friendly and home to summertime events like a sandcastle competition in late July, beach soccer competition mid August and the Jewish Worldbeat Festival in late August. There are concession stands, changing rooms, showers and grassy areas. Skimmers alert: this is the perfect place for skim boarding once you learn the optimal tidal conditions. Great for swimming and other adventurous water sports such as windsurfing. Lifeguards are assigned for the safety of the visitors and parking is free.

Lower Seymour Conservation Reserve

"Nature Right Outside the City"

This 5,668-hectare (14,005.9-acre) area of dense and gorgeous temperate rain forest lies right outside downtown's northern perimeter. Hike, bike, picnic, or tour this magnificent and accessible reserve for an entire day. Lower Seymour Conservation Reserve is made up of thick forest, alpine meadows, river flood plains, a lake, and a dam, which is used for research, education, demonstration and as a water reserve. Take the kids on an educational walk, or grab a bottle of wine and some food and take your partner for a romantic date in the woods.

Monte Grouse

"Divertimento alpino durante tutto l'anno"

Ad un'altezza di 1.250 metri, le alte vette di Grouse Mountain sono prova della bellezza incontaminata della British Columbia. Chiamata così in onore dell'autoctona pernice blu, che abita le zone alpine della provincia, questa attrazione fa parte delle montagne del North Shore del nord di Vancouver. Dato che la montagna rimane accessibile tutto l'anno, restano a disposizione una serie di servizi di lusso indipendentemente dalla stagione. La Grouse Mountain ospita uno splendido cinema in quota, uno chalet e un lodge costruiti lungo la sua base e un'elegante seggiovia che permette di godere di ampie vedute panoramiche sui paesaggi mozzafiato della regione. Un rifugio faunistico e un comprensorio sciistico occupano gli angoli più alpini della montagna.

Deep Cove

"Quaint Seaside Town"

Take an easy ride by public transit or car to the quaint village of Deep Cove in North Vancouver. The area was first inhabited by the Squamish Salish nation, who settled in the area thousands of years ago. In the 1800s, the English and Spanish used the area as a fishing village and whaling cove. Although it's only 20 minutes from downtown, visitors to Deep Cove will feel as though they have left the hustle and bustle of city life far behind them. Surrounded by mountains and overlooking a tranquil cove, the town is a spectacular setting in which to spend a day. Visitors can enjoy a myriad of activities, including kayaking, hiking, biking, shopping, sampling the offerings of great restaurants, or just relaxing at one of the town's outdoor coffee shops.

Monte Cypress

"Un campo giochi per tutto l'anno"

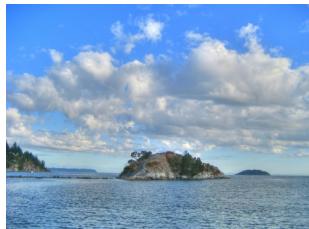

A 30 minuti dal Downtown di Vancouver, questa maestosa e bellissima montagna si trova immersa nel parco provinciale Cypress. La montagna è sede di diverse attività durante tutto l'anno, con discese di sci alpino, sci di fondo, snowboarding, e tobogan. Dopo una attiva giornata sportiva si può fare un salto agli alberghi Black Mountain o Hollyburn per bere qualcosa. In estate non ci si può perdere una passeggiata lungo il percorso del lago Yew. Si può scrivere per ricevere informazioni generali o sui costi di pass e tessere. È uno dei punti principali dei Giochi olimpici invernali del 2010.

Parco Whytecliffe

"Il perfetto scenario da pic nic"

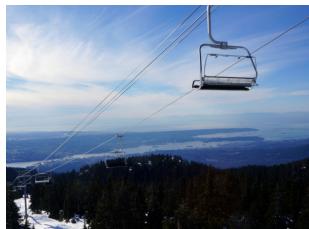

Con il meraviglioso oceano e la vista delle isole, questo parco si presenta come il sogno di qualsiasi fotografo. Ci si può portare dietro un cestino da pic nic e stendere la tovaglia sul prato, per godersi l'aria fresca. Le calme acque della zona lo rendono la destinazione di molte gente che si immerge. La spiaggia è di pietre e sono diversi i punti dove ci si può fermare in vari luoghi nascosti tra le rocce per fare un pic nic. Sono numerosi i tragitti che portano a punti panoramici che si affacciano sulle rocce e lo stretto di Georgia. Nei fine settimana estivi si riempie di gente. Ci si può arrivare facilmente con l'autobus dal Downtown.

Mount Seymour

"Discover Skiing and Snowboarding"

Discover the joys of skiing and snowboarding on Mount Seymour. First-time lessons are a bargain compared to big resorts, and you can rent the equipments from the on-site shop. There is also tobogganing and snow-tubing along the Enquist Snow Tube Park. A sure fun option to get together with friends and family out in the snow.
