

"Best Local History & Culture in San Francisco"

Created By: Cityseeker

📍 8 Locaties in uw favorieten

📷 by Gerard Koskovich ©

GLBT History Museum

"We Are Family"

The GLBT History Museum, the first of its kind in all of the United States and the second in the world, sits fittingly just off Castro Street and 18th Street, home to a lot of gay culture and history. It opened 25 years to the day after the inauguration of the GLBT Historical Society which is aimed at gathering, protecting and interpreting the vast history of the LGBT community, thereby both offering exposure to and showing their support of these often marginalized groups. Pieces and exhibits at the museum come from the historical society's archives which are located at 657 Mission Street #300 and are accessible to both members and non-members (at restricted times). The organization is always looking for volunteers to help in its mission, so whether you are part of the family or an ally you are always welcome to lend a hand.

☎ +1 415 621 1107

🌐 www.glbthistory.org/museum/ ✉ info@glbthistory.org

📍 4127 18th Street, San Francisco CA

📷 by Dennis Jarvis ©

Kabeltram museum

"Geheimen Onthuld"

Als je wilt weten hoe een kabeltram werkt, is het Kabeltrammuseum de plek om dit te leren. De eerste kabeltram ter wereld staat hier en met een precieze uitleg over hoe deze kleine kabeltrams zich tot halverwege de sterren komen. In een ondergrondse bezichtigingruimte kun je de enorme kabelwielen zien die 18 kilometer kabel met een snelheid van 15 kilometers per uur voort trekken. De kabeltrams bewegen door aan de kabel vast te haken. Onderzoek van dichtbij de stalen kabels, de uitrusting en de karretjes die het meest bekende middel van transport van de stad tot leven brengen. Mis de winkel niet, waar je je eigen stuk gebruikte kabel kunt kopen.

☎ +1 415 474 1887

🌐 www.cablecarmuseum.org/

📍 1201 Mason Street, San Francisco CA

📷 by BrokenSphere ©

Pacific Heritage Museum

"Pacific Rim Museum"

This private museum, established in 1984 by the Bank of Canton, features Pacific Rim art, culture, and historic exhibits. Learn more about the Pacific Rim economic history. View sculptures and paintings by renowned and emerging artists. The 10,000 square feet of this Embarcadero District museum resides in the historic US Sub treasury Building, which was used as a U.S. Mint until 1874. Find featured exhibits that are periodically rotated as well as permanent displays. Free admission.

☎ +1 415 399 1124

📍 608 Commercial Street, Between Montgomery and Kearny Streets, San Francisco CA

Galeria de la Raza

"Art Like Nowhere Else"

Galeria de la Raza is deep in the heart of the Mission and worth getting to. The walls are lined by works of multiple artists. See different mediums of local talent present their work in this down-home, yet sophisticated gallery. There are no prices on the work, but that will not deter those who appreciate unique products of the mind. Check out the Chicano/Latino drawing and works on paper, the documentary on jail-art, or beautiful black-and-white photos of the Latinos in and outside of the neighborhood. The gallery offers rental spaces too. Visit website for more information.

+1 415 826 8009

www.galeriadelaraza.org/ info@galeriadelaraza.org

2857 24th Street, San Francisco CA

Brandweermuseum San Francisco

"Eer in Ere Houden"

Het San Francisco Fire Department Museum laat de geschiedenis zien van de brandweer in de stad San Francisco. Tentoonstellingen gaan terug tot 1849 toen het verplicht was voor ieder huishouden om een noodemmer gevuld met water te hebben. Je vindt er diverse uniformen, brandweer materiaal, vuur-motoren, waterpompen en andere essentiële zaken die werden gebruikt door de brandweer door de jaren heen.

by "keith ellwood"

+1 415 558 3546

www.guardiansofthecity.org/sffd/index.html

655 Presidio Avenue, San Francisco CA

Beat Museum

"The Beat Goes On"

Located in North Beach, The Beat Museum celebrates Jack Kerouac, Allen Ginsberg and all who influenced the Beat Generation. Offering a variety of Beat memorabilia and paraphernalia including fine art, prints, posters, photos, new and used books, CDs, DVDs, t-shirts and more, this is a must stop for all collectors and Kerouac fans. The museum also hosts open mic poetry nights, movie screenings, and other cultural events.

+1 800 537 6822

www.kerouac.com/ info@kerouac.com

540 Broadway, San Francisco CA

San Francisco Railway Museum

"Historical Streetcars"

San Francisco Railway Museum embodies San Francisco's transportation history with everything from a reconstructed portion of a Market St. Railway Co. 100-class street-car to cable car note cards designed by local artists. Enjoy pictures of the famous ferry-building street-car loop, fare boxes and a Wiley birdcage traffic signal, which allows attendees to see how intersections were patrolled over 100 years ago. Striving to be an interactive museum, knowledgeable docents give talks and answer questions while a resourceful database with an audio & video touch screen is on hand to further educate. If the J-street cars or Powell street trolley cars have always been of interest to you, then enter this museum, which explains their evolution and continues to pave their future.

by edwardhblake

+1 415 974 1948

www.streetcar.org/museum/ jhogan@streetcar.org

77 Steuart Street, San Francisco CA

by Frank Schulenburg

Angel Island Immigration Station

"Historic Landmark"

A trip to Angel Island is incomplete without a visit to the Immigration Station. This is the site where a large number of Asian and other immigrants were detained in the early 20th Century. Nicknamed the "Ellis Island of the West" after its New York counterpart, this station features recreated rooms with bunk beds as well as spaces and original graffiti that are a window into the life of an immigrant. A part of the National Register of Historic Places, the station is an important piece of the island's history.

+1 415 658 7691

www.aiisf.org/

info@aiisf.org

Off North Ridge Road, Angel Island, Tiburon CA

KIJK MET ONS MEE:

cityseeker.com