Muséum d'histoire naturelle de Marseille

"The Natural World"

Established in 1815 through the impetus of the Marquis de Montgrand, then mayor of Marseilles, the Natural History Museum of Marseille assembles some of the most invaluable examples of our natural heritage. Housed in the right wing of Palais Longchamp, a magnificent palace built in the Second Empire, the museum's collections earned it, in 1967, a place among the top nine museums in France. Today, with more than 200,000 species classified according to similarities of origin, structure etc., the museum seeks to preserve the memory of our rich biodiversity.

Hôtel Le Corbusier

"Housed in Le Corbusier's Legendary Building"

Nicknamed la maison du fada (fada meaning 'crazy' in Provençal dialect) by the Marseillais in reference to its designer Le Corbusier, the 55,000 tons of this building resting on gigantic pillars and surrounded by three hectares of grounds provides an unusual setting for the three-floor Hôtel Le Corbusier. Built in the immediate post-Second World War period, this colossal apartment block was conceived as the ideal family habitat, complete with a supermarket, bakery and tennis court. Hotel rooms are on the small side but attractively decorated and furnished, and from the rooftop you get a great view of the sea.

Plages du Prado

"Be a Beach Bourgeois"

It was 1975 and in spite of having a long coastline, Marseille wasn't well equipped as far as beach facility and safety was concerned. The Plages du Prado was thus created, combining park and beach facilities all along the coast. Calling this area the "poor man's riviera" would be selling it short. The beaches are a lot less crowded, a lot less pretentious and a lot more beautiful, and the water is ideal for surfing, especially in autumn and winter. Dining at any of the restaurants along l'Escale Borély will round up the perfect day at the beach.

Campagne Pastré Park

"Also Known as Montredon Park"

Below the hills of Marseilleveyre there is a 112-hectare (277-acre) park: Campagne Pastré / Montredon Park which includes a 19th-century country house, the Chateau Pastré. The half-mile (0.8-kilometer) path to the Chateau is a nice walk past lawns, ponds and children's playgrounds. The Campagne Pastré / Montredon Park is the place for a game of pétanque, or a cultural outing (Musée de la Faïence - Tile Museum - in the Chateau Pastré), outdoor activities, a picnic or even a nap under the trees. What makes it even better is that it's only two steps from the beach! The Campagne Pastré / Park Montredon is also a great starting point for a hike into the Calanques. - P.Wicki
