The Bombay Club

"Refined Indian Food"

There are a dozen Indian restaurants in DC but the Bombay Club has distinguished itself as being one of the best. The restaurant has a distinguished hall of fame and has won numerous awards. The chefs blend ancient Ayurvedic tradition with regional Indian flavors (such as Goan, Parsi and Moghlai) as well as vegetarian food. Savor the taste of the Club Calamari; calamari stir-fried with onions, curry leaves, tamarind and a blend of spices. Or jump across the continent to the Northwest frontier to sink your teeth into tandoori chicken chops, which are breasts of chicken, marinated overnight in a blend of almonds, cashews, yoghurt, ginger and garlic. The menu is as diverse and exotic as India itself.

The Lafayette

"Fine Dining"

The Lafayette Room in the Hay-Adams Hotel overlooks Lafayette Square and the White House. Businessmen, politicians, lobbyists and lawyers frequent this favorite haunt. The restaurant serves breakfast, lunch and dinner, so you can visit any time of day. On Sundays you can take a leisurely break whilst filling up on delectable food at the brunch.

1789 Restaurant

"Classic & Romantic Dining"

1789 Restaurant, a formal, elegant restaurant in Georgetown, is a Washington favorite. Its Federal-era architecture is nicely accentuated by burning fireplaces and classic linen-and-silver table settings. A wide range of New American entrees are featured on the menu. There are fine vegetarian offerings as well as non-vegetarian delicacies like hanger steak and grill rack of lamb. The desserts here are similarly divine.
