Café Brazil

"Hearty Sandwiches, Bottomless Cups Of Coffee"

Café Brazil is a Dallas institution and while there are a few locations around town, each one distinctly represents the area it's located. The two main locations are in Deep Ellum and by Southern Methodist University and both are open 24/7. It is quite common to see students burning the midnight oil, people getting out of the clubs, truck drivers and attorneys at all hours tucking into the great food. The sandwiches are on thick slices of homemade bread and piled high with toppings. The omelets are made with farm fresh eggs and served with rosemary potatoes and grilled bread. The Brazilian Beef Sandwich is piled high with beef fajitas, mushrooms, bell peppers on homemade herb wheat bun and the Barbecue Salmon with fried sweet potatoes and Steamed Broccoli is amazing. There are 7 different choices daily for your bottomless cup of coffee kick.

Boi Na Braza

"Brazilian Restaurant in Grapevine"

Everything about Boi Na Braza is Brazilian - the food, the chefs and the architecture. Even the oil paintings that adorn the walls were commissioned and painted by Brazilian artists. Dallas Morning News gave Boi Na Braza a four-star review. The name translated means "steer over embers," which is just how the food here is cooked. Beef, lamb, pork and poultry are cooked the way Brazilians have been doing it since the 1800s - over golden embers after the pit fire died down. You will enjoy exquisite cuts of meat, including Beef Sirloin, Lamb Chops, Pork Sausage, and Leg of Lamb. Other favorites include the Chicken Breast with Bacon and the extensive salad bar.
