Baranis

"French Affair"

Located in a huge cellar, this bar is one of the best places to savor fine wine in the city. Choose from the likes of Louis Roederer Brut, Langlois Brut Rose, and Warre's vintage port wine. Of special note are the pastis and absinthe drinks. There are also various cocktails to choose from. Accompanying your wines is a selection of delicacies such as the Socca and Pear and Blue Cheese Crostini, all of which pair quite well. Its newly introduced burger is quite popular among the locals. The ambience is relaxed and comfortable. The staff is great.

Scandinavian Kitchen

"Quirky Scandanavian Cafe in London"

Anybody who has visited Scandinavia will appreciate the quirky and stylish red-fronted cafe that is London's very own Scandinavian Kitchen. The cheerful and jolly cafe is popular with locals who not only visit to pick up one of the options from tasty toasties, sandwiches and wraps, but secretly in the hope they will bear witness to the staff suddenly bursting out in an impromptu sing-along. The food all has a Nordic touch, with Swedish meatball sandwich and pickled herrings on rye bread appearing to be a firm favorite with regulars together. The cafe also doubles as a grocery, selling everything from cured salmon to crusty breads.

The Modern Pantry

"The Future of Home Cooking"

Relaxed and lightly decorated, the Modern Pantry is an ideal retreat to grab a quick, tasty snack. The eclectic all-day menu is bespoke of futuristic fusion. For example, the mouth-watering combos include chorizo with scotched quail eggs and tomato relish, date and feta fritters with rose yogurt or a grilled tamarind and miso-marinated onglet steak. Known for their breakfast and brunch offerings, Modern Pantry lives up to the expectation of their followers, local and tourists. For dessert, why not try green tea scones with gooseberry compote and clotted cream? If you are inspired by the future of cooking you can even pick up a Modern Pantry cookbook! Modern Pantry also offers facilities like outside catering and private venue hire.
