The Shakespeare Houses

"Shakespearean Connections And Associations"

The Shakespeare Birthplace Trust owns and operates the five Shakespeare Houses in and around Stratford. Three of these, Shakespeare's Birthplace, Hall's Croft and Nash's House & New Place, are in Stratford itself. The other two, Anne Hathaway's Cottage and Mary Arden's House, are set in the outlying villages of Shottery and Wilmcote respectively. Each of these beautifully preserved Shakespeare Houses gives you the chance to fully imagine the world inhabited by the most famous playwright and poet in history.

Butterfly Farm

"Europe's Largest Butterfly Farm"

Proudly proclaiming the fact that it is "Europe's largest", the Stratford-upon-Avon Butterfly Farm affords a peaceful retreat away from all things Shakespearean. Hundreds of butterflies can be viewed at close quarters, many of the species sporting spectacular colors. For those interested in less attractive, more frightening creatures, other insect displays are available, including stick insects, leaf-eating ants and the world's largest spider.

Great Malvern Priory

"Beautiful 15th Century Church"

More like a pocket cathedral, Malvern began as a Benedictine priory in the 11th Century. Massive Norman pillars and arches support 15th-century stonework and a strikingly ornate bell tower. The medieval stained glass is among the best in England, as are the wall tiles. The 12 original oak choir stalls have charming carvings under the seats showing 15th-century daily life. Other carvings not to miss are monsters, an angel, a mermaid, and four rats hanging a cat! Set in a peaceful churchyard, the Priory is a short walk from the Great Malvern train station.
